Grace Bay Club restaurant serves everything in jars

By Gay Nagle Myers

Grace Bay Club in Providenciales, Turks and Caicos launched its newest culinary concept called Jars on Grace Bay.

All menu items are served in jars of various shapes and sizes. Jars features local cuisine, a variety of wines, mixed punches and cocktails.

Guests eat, drink and savor the views at a 30-foot communal table with stools. The main bar is located under a palm tree thatch hut with a lounge area, complete with oversized sofas and background music.

Jars is the second pop-up casual dining experience at Grace Bay, arriving two years after Stix on Grace Bay made its debut on the beach.

Jars and Stix are pop-up restaurants because they are designed to be seasonal places to enable guests to enjoy cocktails and nibbles without having to leave the beach.

Befitting its name, Stix's menu is served on sticks or skewers.

A second Stix has opened at West Bay Club, the boutique resort three miles from Grace Bay Club that was rebranded by Grace Bay Resorts last July.

In addition, the new Noodle Bar + Kitchen, the former Atlantic Bar & Grill, recently opened and offers noodles and pasta with Caribbean flavors and spices in a renovated outdoor setting that accommodates up to 80 guests.
